2. Source insists that the Fifth Guards Army was actually the Fifth Guards Moto-Mechanized Army, that this headquarters was deactivated some time after August 1946, and that its units have been placed under the direct command of the Central Group of Forces, Baden. [REDACTED] It is believed that this is a trend in line with the suspected Soviet effort to build ten mechanized armies. This disposition may represent a transition period for the Fifth Army, during which its headquarters might be obscured until the desired change from an infantry unit to a mechanized unit is completed.)

3. The Thirty-Second Guards Rifle Corps, with headquarters in St. Poelten, has a new commanding general, believed to be the former commanding general of the now deactivated Thirty-Third Corps.

4. The headquarters of the Ninety-Fifth Rifle Division is at Amstetten. Major General A.I. Oleinikov has definitely returned to Moscow. His successor is not known.

5. Components of the Ninety-Fifth Guards Rifle Division:

284th Regiment, headquarters unknown.

290th Regiment, headquarters near Linz.

287th Regiment, headquarters 4 km. from Urfehr; regiment charged with the surveillance of the Czech and U.S. Zone borders.

Personalities of the 287th Regiment:

Colonel Eryomin, commanding officer.
 Major Agranat, political deputy.
 Major Samorukov, chief of staff.
